Roland Introduces New Keyboard Carrying Cases and Bags

High-Quality Solutions for Transporting Various Roland Keyboard Models

Los Angeles, CA, March 18, 2021 — Roland has added a number of new keyboard carrying cases and bags to its leading lineup of accessories for musicians. Offering the same high standards of quality and lasting durability that the company's instruments are famous for, these custom-crafted products deliver trusted performance for transporting and storing Roland portable keyboards.

Perfect for performing players, the SC-G series of semi-rigid keyboard cases offer great protection for both local gigging and home storage. Each case features durable exterior materials, side impact walls, and thick internal foam padding, plus adjustable internal straps to secure the instrument during transport. Three built-in wheels, skid rails, and reinforced handles make travel easy, while the extra-large front pocket provides ample room for pedals, mics, and other items. The SC-G series includes models for 61-note keyboards (SC-G61W3), 76-note keyboards (SC-G76W3), and 88-note keyboards (SC-G88W3).

Designed for an 88-note portable piano or synthesizer keyboard, the CB-B88V2 Keyboard Bag is an updated version of the popular CB-B88. The bag's rugged exterior, thick padding, and soft fleece materials shield the instrument from bumps and bruises, while the large front pocket holds sheet music and accessories. The CB-B88V2 also includes a padded insert that can be moved to fit instruments of different lengths, a feature not available in the previous-generation model.

The CB-GO61KP Keyboard Bag is an essential companion for 61-note keyboard models in the Roland GO series, including GO:PIANO, GO:KEYS, and GO:PIANO with Alexa Built-in. This quality bag provides instrument protection while on the move, with a handle for grab-and-go carrying and backpack straps for longer journeys. Internal and external pockets are also available for stowing sheet music and accessories.
